On this unique Albatros expedition cruise, we will venture far away from the usual tourist routes and visit places where only true expeditioners and scientist travel. Here we will experience unspoilt Arctic landscapes with good chances of seeing polar bears, whales, and musk oxen.

Heading out from Reykjavik, our first call is the isolated Inuit community, Ittoqqortoormiit. From here we navigate into the overwhelming Kong Oskar Fjord, which acts as a gateway for the North Greenland National Park, the world's largest nature reserve.

Navigating the sheltered interior of the National Park's fjord system, we are likely to enjoy stable September weather with clear skies and distant views. Snow dusts the mountain tops, and the supernatural wonders of Aurora Borealis can be seen at night.

We make landings at century old hunting stations in breath-taking landscapes, as our ship navigates north around Ella and Ymer Islands into Kejsler Franz Joseph Fjord. On the south-bound voyage we will aim for Carlsberg Fjord and the dramatic Blossesville Coast, hopefully to make landings near the great fjord of Kangerlussuaq.

The last day will be at sea, enjoying lectures from Albatros' expedition team – or getting glimpses of sea birds migrating south. Entering Reykjavik, we bid farewell to the vessel and crew.
